5709 — Rosh Hashonah Faith Yields Courage

What is there really new about the New Year? As we record a change of year in the calendar the world for the most part remains the same old habitation. We witness no miraculous changes in the world about us when we write a new figure of time.

Our teachers were wise when they instituted the phrase, "Shono Tovo", with which we are to greet each other at this season. Our faith never speaks of a New Year but of Shono Tovo, "a good year." For, in the Jewish tradition at this season, we are to look within ourselves and seek nobler standards of living. We are more to be concerned with the inner life than to look for transformations without. Hence we must pray with the Psalmists, "So teach us to number our days that we may get us a heart of wisdom" (Psalm 90).

Our sages, too, have proclaimed Rosh Hashonah as "Hayom Haras Olom", as the very day when the world was created. Rosh Hashonah, so they would have us believe, is the day when, amidst void and chaos, God proclaimed, "Let there be light," and thus the chaos took on form.

Chronologically, this concept of the sages as to the world's anniversary may be but a legend, but psychologically, it serves to bring home to us a great truth.

Is not our world on this Rosh Hashonah in a stage of chaos? Behold, the dislocations and the ruin of our civilization. How urgently is humanity in need of rebirth! For, indeed, these post-war years have brought weariness and disappointment to mankind. What chance is there for the establishment of an enduring world order, an order founded on justice and brotherhood? Wherein lies the tragedy of man that he has failed so miserably again and again in building God's kingdom on earth?

We must turn to the ancient prophets of Israel who have long ago traced man's failure. These have proclaimed again and again that man's stumbling is due to the seed of evil within man's own heart. They proclaimed the truth that there is no hope for the world unless individual man lives by the moral law. Alas, in our day we have come to place the burden of the world's evil upon the systems of government, economics and politics. These may be and are contributory factors to world collapse. There is no doubt about it. But the basic cause for the failure of our civilization is the individual who lives without ethical conduct.

"He has told thee, O Man, what is good and what the Lord doth require of thee, only to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God". This admonition of the great prophet must be fleshed in daily living by every human in order that mankind may have a spiritual rebirth. It will, indeed, be a good and new year when each and every person will seek a renewal of spirit within his own heart. The "good society" will not be a reality and the world will continue in a state of chaos unless the individual undergoes a moral regeneration. Without morality mankind is destined for despair, dissolution and tragedy.

How meaningful therefore is the ancient prayer of the Rosh Hashonah ritual which reads thus: "O Lord, our God, let Thy presence be manifest to us in all Thy works, that reverence for Thee may fill the hearts of all Thy creatures. May all the children of men come before Thee in humility and unite to do Thy will with a perfect heart. May all acknowledge that Thine are Power, Dominion and Majesty and that Thy name is exalted above all."

We greet the New Year 5709 in an atomic age. It is a time of great fear and anxiety. We all know that man has at last discovered the very weapon with which to destroy the world in its entirety in a moment of time. Along with our inherited fears from our ancestors, we are thus terrified by the added fear of the atomic bomb. A new year can become a good year when the heart resolves to remove fear and take on courage. The message of Rosh Hashonah is that of faith which yields courage. We must discipline ourselves to face up to the dark spaces of life and build for ourselves inner strength.

Surely, as Jews we have much reason to be renewed in strength in this year 5709. Behold, the miracle of Israel's rebirth! Behold, how during the last three months the world has been following with admiration the happenings in Israel! Israel has scored victories, Israel has made great achievements which few believed possible. The chapter of heroism written by defenders of the new Jewish state has brought new dignity to Jewish life. What an electrifying effect have Israel's victories in field of battle and in the diplomatic world had upon Jews in the Diaspora!

The very indifferent within Jewry and the very estranged from Jewry have thus become aroused to the bond of unity binding world Jewry. No one can deny that the Jewish state is an essential to the survival of the Jewish people and no one can deny that the Jewish faith is indispensable to the survival both of the Jewish state and the Jewish people.

The present-day miracle of Israel should help to purge us from fear and faint-heartedness of our Galut mentality. Let us no longer apologize for ourselves. Let us not speak of our minority status. But let us proclaim anew the great truth for which Israel has been summoned by God as the witness and the bearer of a way of life upon which hinges the very hope of civilization. Indeed, "the Lord hath done great things with us".

What a privileged generation is ours! Let us, therefore, rejoice and in our rejoicing resolve to share with the Yishuv in Palestine in writing the first chapters of a brave new history for Israel and mankind. Fervently, we offer the prayer for the final victory in Eretz Israel when speedily there will at last be established a peace settlement between Arab and Jew and when Israel will be granted a seat in the councils of the world.

With the birth of the new Jewish state we behold the birth of "the new Jew." With the birth of the Jewish state we behold a new influence which Judaism and Jewish culture will come to exert upon the world. For Israel is resolved to build a life in Palestine based on the teachings of Israel's prophets; upon justice and righteousness and love.

We who live in the Diaspora must find new inner strength by dedicating ourselves to Judaism, as symbolized by the synagogue, the very institution which is central to Jewish life. For, were it not for the faith taught by the synagogue, Israel could never have managed to survive and could never have achieved the very revival which we witness today in Eretz Israel.

Not in two thousand years has Israel witnessed such a promising Rosh Hashonah. May we match this great hour in our history. May we do all to uphold the hands of the builders of the new Zion and thus share in the work of redemption for Israel and through Israel share in the redemption of mankind. Leshono Tovo Tikosevu, may we be all inscribed in the Book Of Life on this New Year, that it may be a good year for us of the household of Israel and for all mankind.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

This is the birthday of the world for, according to tradition, it was created about fifty-seven hundred years ago and each Rosh Hashonah is the celebration of an anniversary. In Jewish folk-lore man was created on Rosh Hashonah and on Rosh Hashonah he is re-created. Consider the enormity of that lofty conception. Man was not only born in the image of God, which gives the highest worth and dignity to the human personality, but on Rosh Hashonah he is re-created exactly of the same pattern. Whatever else he has been before, he is now back again where he was at the beginning with such a sense of cosmic rating and special status that the world is once more before him and a fresh start is his for the taking.

The deep conviction that every human being is made in the divine image gave to the Jew a feeling of importance that acted as a coat of armor against hostility and was the real secret weapon which he carried with him through the fires of persecution and the acid streams of tyranny and discrimination. In the dark hours when his laughter was stilled by anguish the Jew was braced by his feeling of destiny and holy purpose and the need of the universe for the plain things he had to say about people living as though they belonged to a brotherhood with obligations to one another.

In the worst poverty the Jew still possessed the rich jewels of the spirit which adorn the belief that the world which was created by the Lord can be re-created through the help of man as a partner in big undertakings for the social welfare of all humanity. By virtue of this faith the Jew developed an imperviousness to the foul deeds of his tormentors and this shield saved him when they degenerated and disintegrated and he remained superior and apart through a moral code which stressed individual responsibility for every action.

Rosh Hashonah reflects anxious concern for the year to come as well as for the record of the year that has gone. Each time it promises redemption of the world but only through the observance of the moral law, the one and only price there is for human betterment. Rosh Hashonah is the alarm call to conscience just as the blowing of the trumpet signifies. It is an appeal to the nations as well as to the individual for what is right and what is just and merciful. It is the Day Of Judgment when sinfulness is under scrutiny.

These are the Holy Days, the Days of Awe. Solemnity is the keynote of the season. The dry and yellow leaf scurries ahead of a heightened wind. Rosh Hashonah begins the Ten Days of Penitence. The Sabbath reading during the time of repentance, taken from Hosea, speaks about "Return". Return to what? Return to God, which means return to foundation instruction for a way to live that will bring peace and happiness. Return to first things, to basic fundamentals, to the eternal truths which are at least as good in the atomic age as they were when Hosea exhorted: "Return."

In Jewish legend there is a priceless story of use to this day, about two brothers who lived in a certain spot and equally shared their farm produce. One brother had a family of children and the other brother had none. At the end of a day when the wheat had been harvested, the brothers left for their homes, each one thinking of the other. The one who had the children thought that he was luckier than his brother. In his old age his children would take care of him and his wife. But his poor brother had no children to look after him when he was old. So he went back into the field and added some of his wheat to his brother's. The brother without children thought of the great responsibility which his brother had to feed and raise his family and how unfair it was for him with no children to take an equal share of the harvest. So he went back to the field and added a large quantity of his wheat to his brother's. This went on for three nights. For three mornings each noticed that he still had his original amount. Finally, the two brothers ran into each other in the middle of the field, each carrying wheat up to his eyes from his heap to his brother's. When each told the other what he had been thinking that impelled him to return to the field by night for the other's sake, the brothers hugged each other and their tears welled up from the bottom of their hearts at the thought of this wonderful experience.

These days, all of which are awesome days due to the existence of atomic energy, the halls of Jewry reverberate with political clatter more than they resound with explanations of ethical principles and the great idea of the brotherhood of man which originated in the wisdom of Jewish social concern. The words are big and impressive and the noise is terrific but there is nothing stirring in them to save civilization from total destruction.

What the Jewish New Year has to offer the world at this precarious stage is far simpler. It is contained in the prophetic portion from Hosea for the Sabbath of Repentance during the solemn days of retrospection and self-examination. "Return" is the plea. Return to the single basic principle of righteousness, to the moral way, to a respect for the human personality, to all those things that are summed up as Jewish teaching, for a happier and a safer world inscribed in the Book of Life. f.f.c.

The Challenge Of Rosh Hashonah

By Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, Senior Rabbi,
Goel Tzedec Synagogue, Toronto

The Jewish year which is now closing has been one of the most momentous in the annals of the Jewish people. The United Nations, speaking for the instructed conscience of the civilized world, acknowledged and confirmed on November 29th the ancient claim of the Jewish people to an independent national existence; and May 14th the representatives of the Jewish people assembled in Tel Aviv, and recognized as such by the subsequent act of the Security Council, proclaimed the sovereign and independent State of Israel. And thus they did, it is important to notice, as representing not only the Jewish people in Palestine but also "the Zionist movement of the world."

There are few Jews who will be able to disclaim a measure of personal responsibility, however small, for these historic events and therefore for their far-reaching consequences. Which of us has not at one time or other thrown a coin into a National Fund box? Which of us has not attended a meeting or signed a document which, directly or directed, has forwarded the Zionist cause? Which of us has not contributed to communal funds which, in part or in whole, have been used for the upbuilding or security of the new State? On Rosh Hashonah these personal responsibilities come home to us. Did we do right or wrong? And if right, did we do enough of the right? And are we ready to face and discharge the responsibilities of these acts?

And if there are Jews who, because of hostility, or isolation, or indifference, or evasion, can claim that they have had no part in this revolution, which has changed the face of Jewish history, they too have a personal responsibility for which to answer. If they hold to their hostility in spite of what has happened, were they consistent and courageous enough in their opposition, or did they yield sincerity and conviction to the pressure of the multitude? If their failure to share the heat and burden of the day has been due to parsimony or indolence, what price has been paid for these sins in lives lost, agonies endured, and hopes frustrated or postponed?

Rosh Hashonah as we now celebrate it is not as old as some other of the high solemnities and festival occasions in the Jewish calendar. There is little direct Biblical warrant for it; it does not commemorate any great national historical event, nor does it spring from the hope of victory in the immemorial and recurrent battle with nature, which is born in the minds of man at the turning points of the agricultural year.

Rosh Hashonah is the offspring of the religious experience of the Jew, it reflects and expresses his whole philosophy of life, and his conception of the place of man in the divine ordering of the universe. It has developed through the Jewish centuries in response to the deepest needs of the human soul. It is one of the most majestic creations of the religious genius of the Jew. Free-will, sin, repentance, atonement, the divinity of man, the triumph of the human spirit over the powers of evil — this is the doctrinal procession, and this may mark the path of a triumphant progress from the lowest depths of human backsliding up to confident fellowship with the Lord of life Himself. This is the challenge of Rosh Hashonah. There is none greater in the whole history of human aspiration.

There is no soul, however insignificant and humble, which does not possess the majestic power of mastering his own spiritual destiny, of returning (Teshuvah) to the Source of Truth, Justice and Right, of lifting himself up by an act of will into at-one-ment with God Himself. Let others speak in terms of race, creed and social or religious privilege. Let them, if they must, suffer the temples of their worship to be invaded by the discriminations of the world. But for us who are Jews, every human soul, whoever or wherever he may be, is among the movers and shapers of destiny. This is Judaism. It is also the ultimate democracy.

The folk-lore of our people puts it more simply and more vividly. On the Rosh Hashonah the Book of Destiny is opened. A recording angel writes. But what he writes is determined, under Providence, not by him but by us. What we have done or left undone in Palestine, for example, will have consequences —of ordeals, of agonies, of achievements, of triumphs. They will by an inexorable law go down into the Book. Can we at this late hour expunge a word or suspend a judgement? The faith of the Jews affirms that by dedication and high resolve we can. And the outward and visible sign of this faith is Rosh Hashonah.

I have spoken of what we have done or left undone in Palestine only because these things loom large in our lives and must colour

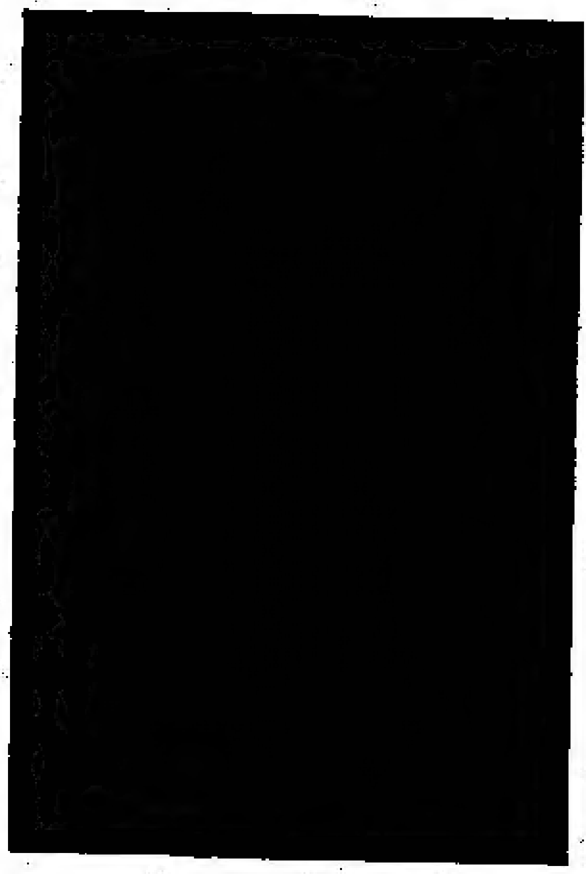
A New Year Message

By Samuel Bronfman, Of Montreal,
National President Of The Canadian Jewish Congress

That the year which has just passed into history, the year 5708, will go down in the annals of Jewry marked with a distinction and memories all its own, does not permit of doubt. For what happened in this blessed year of Geulah is unparalleled in the twenty centuries which preceded it; for the first time in two millenia an end was put to Jewish national homelessness; the Diaspora became a purely voluntary concept; and thousands in the refugee camps of Europe for whom the past ten years the world had darkened, saw once more the ray of hope and salvation. On May fifteenth, a Jewish State in Palestine having been proclaimed, Israel as such entered again the comity of nations.



Samuel Bronfman, Montreal, President, Canadian Jewish Congress
—Copyright by Karsh

Certainly there will well forth from the hearts of Jews everywhere, as during the High Holidays we congregate in our synagogues and temples, a great feeling of thankfulness to the Lord, our God, who in our time and for our generation has accomplished this thing. The prayers and liturgy which in our service rotated about the name of Eretz Israel will this year take on a new meaning, a contemporary significance; and this year will be different from all the years which went before, in that its retrospect will look back upon something positive, constructive, hopeful for the future. For a new holiday has entered the Jewish calendar.

That much still remains to be undertaken goes without saying. The havoc of twenty centuries is not corrected in a twelvemonth. Thousands of our brothers still languish in destitution in various parts of the globe; the conditions of war which for all others ended in 1945 are for them still a bitter, a continuing reality. But complete reconstruction does not take place in a day. What is important is that the conscience of the world has been stirred, that the United Nations have been moved to make their decision to nullify an ancient wrong, and that a new era in Jewish history is begun. Canadian Jewry, it need hardly be said, is proud of the role which its Government played in the events which brought these things to pass.

For itself, ever rooted to the land with which it has bound its hopes and its future, Canadian Jewry sees unroll before it the constantly widening panorama of a developing Canadianism, one in which the various ethnic groups which go to make up the Canadian entity, strive together for the common welfare. It is a view which challenged the sincerity and the talents of all Canadians and nothing less than the enthusiastic acceptance of that challenge will do, if we wish our country to play that part in human affairs to which it is justly entitled. Already our country serves as an example to the world, first in the friendly living together of the peoples which compose it, and again, in the unfortified frontier which is at once the marvel and the envy of less fortunate states.

But there remain yet other fields, cultural and social, in which the Canadian temperament can be made to show its quality. If in international politics we are content to be designated a Middle Power, in human relations, in democratic advance, in cultural progress, we shall not be content with anything less than the status of a Great Power. It is not a mean ambition that thus agitates the hearts of Canadians. It can be achieved only through the cooperation of all Canadians, of whatever race, or creed, or walk of life they be. Towards the achievement of that objective Canadian Jewry means to make whatever contributions there shall lie in its power to make.

our worship and thought this Rosh Hashonah as never before. But they form only part of our experience and obligation. We have our relationship and obligation as members of families, as citizens, and, let us never forget it, members of the human family as a whole. We cannot be equal to the challenge of this Festival unless all are brought within the compass of our repentance, our resolves and aspirations. Shall we know love or bitterness, justice or oppression, peace or war? The answer is "not in our stars but in ourselves."

In the New Year we shall go into the battle for righteousness, for justice and for peace, confident in the knowledge that the powers and principalities of the world cannot prevail against us if only we have will and faith.

ASSIGNMENT IN MONTREAL

A View Of Jewish Welfare Agencies Related To Need From Infancy To Old Age

By David Weiss, Executive Director, Family Welfare Department And Jewish Child Welfare Bureau Of The Federation Of Jewish Philanthropies Of Montreal

To appreciate the aims and responsibilities which the organized Jewish social services of Montreal fulfill, one should reflect on the needs, aspirations and problems of a large, vital Jewish community in a metropolitan, modern city.

While the present-day services of our agency and the methods by which they are administered exemplify the progressive developments in the art and science of helping individuals, it must be borne in mind that such services are effective and desirable to the degree that they are integral parts of the community in which they exist and receive their support. Throughout a long and useful history, the work of the many departments of the Baron de Hirsch Institute and the Jewish Child Welfare Bureau has enjoyed this cordial rapport and understanding with the community.

The Jewish community in Montreal expresses its concern for the welfare and individual adjustment of its brethren through the services of these agencies. The community participates in two chief ways in the work and aims of these agencies. One way is through the Boards of Directors and Committees who serve as representatives of the entire community, giving continuity and direction to the agencies' professional content. Another is by virtue of the fact that as constituent societies of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, which participates in the Combined Jewish Appeal, it is within the hands and hearts of every Jew of Montreal to influence and encourage their operations and goals. By giving generously to the Combined Jewish Appeal this fall as in the past, our fellow citizens will benefit from these services at the same time that donors will receive the satisfaction of a mitzvah done with zeducah, good deeds rendered with a sense of justice.

The many functions, or helping activities, of the Jewish Child Welfare Bureau and the Family Welfare Department of the Baron de Hirsch Institute are related to a wide range of human need from infancy through old age. It must be recognized that our agencies exist within a wider group of health and welfare agencies within Federation, in the general community of Montreal, and throughout the country. Both directly and indirectly our agencies' cooperative relationships to sister agencies here and elsewhere enable us to render more effective services in helping our clients and contributing toward the general well-being of the Canadian people.

STORES THROUGHOUT CANADA

In our atomized and complex world each of us may need from time to time specialized social services to overcome and modify otherwise difficult or overwhelming problems in living. No longer is it possible for every individual and his family to withstand the impact of large-scale social forces such as war, economic fluctuations, medical problems and the like. Modern living requires interdependence on one another as embodied in organized resources for help, inasmuch as families are dispersed and individuals maintain primarily impersonal associations.

Historically the Jewish community has always provided mutual aid societies aiming toward the preservation of Jewish family life and individual development. These purposes infuse the aims of our present social agencies as well.

For this reason there are three chief groups of social services which are provided for the people of Montreal. One group of services relates to family welfare; another to child care; and the third to service to refugees and immigrants.

FAMILY WELFARE

In this group of services, the Family Welfare Department provides economic assistance for those unable to maintain themselves owing to illness, unemployment, personal or social maladjustment for short or long periods of time. Financial assistance is given with the aim of maintaining stable family life which otherwise might be disrupted or broken, and helping individual members of families to manage their situations. In every respect such individuals are enabled to achieve some constructive and satisfying way of functioning, and in many cases are helped to return to independence. Medical care, vocational guidance, personal counselling and other specialized services are available from cooperating agencies and are utilized where necessary to help individuals receive the specific help that will enable them to adjust or function more comfortably.

Marital problems and relationships receive the skilled assistance of the social work staff so that persons may be helped to handle what at times can appear to be insuperable obstacles in living together.

A growing problem of planning for the twilight years of the aged also comes within the scope of this agency. Where necessary the facilities of the Hebrew Old People's Home of Montreal are made available for the planned residence of elderly folks who have no other resources. Our agency participates in the admitting procedures for this Home, which is also a constituent society of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

The effect of medical disabilities on family life constitute a serious problem for which the agency provides a variety of services. Individuals who are affected by tuberculosis are assisted in gaining admission to the Mount Sinai Sanatorium, while plans for the care of their families are carried out. In instances of acute medical difficulties encountered by a mother of a family the Department may provide Homemaker Service so that the family may be preserved and maintained until the mother can regain her ability to function.

Specialized services in this group also include assistance with loans, psychiatric consultation, nursing service, referral for group work and other recreational activities, legal aid, governmental pensions and the like.

CHILD CARE

This Department contributes toward the protection and development of children and youth when their own families are disrupted or broken because of death, desertion or divorce, or other similar circumstances. The central service in this group is that of foster home care in substitute families through which the child's unique needs as a growing personality are met. Foster homes are selected which offer good physical, social and emotional care, so that the child may profit from what is at best a difficult and unpleasant experience. The agency owes a great debt to those Jewish families which open their homes

MEANING OF THE ATOMIC AGE

A Call For Fundamental Reorientation In Thinking

By I. I. Rabi, Professor Of Physics At Columbia University;
Winner Of The Nobel Prize For Physics In 1944;
Eyewitness Of First Atomic Bomb Test

The following paper is a condensation of an address Professor Rabi delivered before the American Technion Society in New York:

On July 16, 1945, I was out in the desert of New Mexico awaiting the test of the first atomic bomb. It came. So did history. The atomic age, at least the scientific opening of the atomic age came at about five-thirty in the morning of July 16, 1945. It was a sight which I have attempted from time to time to describe. I never felt successful in doing it. One has to go back to the Bible, to witness of the ancient miracles to get some impression of the tremendous emotional experience which it produced.

The actual military opening and possibly the industrial opening of the atomic age occurred a few weeks later. On August 6, an atomic bomb was dropped over Hiroshima, and three days later over Nagasaki, and the atomic age was formally opened.

The power and majesty of that weapon were well illustrated by those touching scenes when the Japanese tried to surrender. They did not use formal means. They surrendered over the radio. The things came down to the elements. They used the quickest means of communication. They made a wide-open appeal to surrender. I think that was one of the most touching incidents in all history.

Many of us have come to fear the atomic age now, but when one recites what happened in 1945, it is not fear, it is hope which we should get from it. People may say that the war would have ended very quickly in any case, but we do know that it ended then and it ended immediately. Therefore, the first instance of the atomic age was the ending of a very disastrous war.

The second chapter which gives us hope is the concerted effort on the level of international politics to come to terms with this new weapon in such a way as to try to bring in an era of peace.

Now the question comes up: We have these processes for making the bomb and we have the bomb with its tremendous power. How can we live with this thing? What does it mean to us in this country?

In the first place, it means that we are no longer as strong and safe as we were. Under old-fashioned methods of warfare, we sat on this continent, separated from the rest of the world by two wide oceans. No matter what happened, we had time to prepare; we were secure against attack. Now, with the atomic bomb in existence, that is no longer the case. It is true that we have it, and nobody else has, but that is the same sort of security which you have if you buy a fresh egg and put it away. Some years from now—three, five, ten, fifteen—other countries will possess this bomb. Do not consider this bomb as a bomb. Think of it in terms of the magnitude in which we think of other implements of war, not a bomb, but ten thousand bombs.

That bomb over Nagasaki destroyed ten square miles. Ten thousand bombs without any aiming would destroy an area as large as Indiana and Illinois put together, without aiming. They would destroy an area equal to that of Great Britain, without aiming, and if you consider the effect of just a little bit of aiming, you realize that something of that sort could destroy what we consider the essentials of this country.

Even a few hundred bombs could destroy most of our important centers of population and communication. You have heard that the Japanese cities were particularly sleezy and vulnerable to the bomb. American cities are not less so. The important part of New York is not Manhattan Island with its skyscrapers. It is in Queens and Brooklyn and The Bronx, where the people live and have to work, and those areas can be burned out just as easily as Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Therefore, this means that now another nation, possessing a few hundred airplanes, with a suprise attack using a few hundred atomic bombs, could produce more devastation in this country than any of us wishes to imagine. And it means that we are no longer the secure nation we were before this war. We look at England and see what happened to England's insular security. We realize how that security has gone. Ours is just as far in the past.

As a country, we are accustomed to a very high degree of security, but we cannot maintain it by our own efforts alone. It would not help us to have five times as many atomic bombs as the other fellow. Once he has enough to destroy, it does not help you at all if you can destroy him two or three times over. This is a surprise weapon, and can deliver a shattering blow in a very short time.

Consider that country "X" states —it may be true or may not be true—that it has atomic bombs; it has a stockpile of atomic bombs. Then our peace and security are gone. You do not know when you might be subject to an attack by an atomic bomb. Its power lies so much in surprise, it is just a prime surprise weapon. What sort of international relations can exist between countries when this possibility of almost total destruction exists?

I submit that under such conditions people would pray and hope for a war to end the uncertainty. We cannot be complacent about this thing, because if we have a "do-nothing" philosophy, it is bound to come, and I do not think it requires very much imagination to see where it will leave us as a people. At the first announcement that some other country has this weapon, there will be another movement in this country to decentralize, to abandon the cities.

You cannot accomplish such a movement under a democratic, American form of government. You cannot move a large population without installing a totalitarian form of government. The preparation of discipline for the population so that they will know what to do in case one-sixth of New York is wiped out in one blow is the sort of thing we are up against and will be up against unless we do something about it.

The American policy for the control of Atomic Energy has these basic features: It provides for an international authority vested with a monopoly over the whole field of atomic energy. This means, in the first place, that this authority would own uranium and thorium which is mined anywhere in the world, and control all sources of these elements which are essential for the making of the bomb.

Secondly, all research in the field of atomic bombs as a weapon would be confined to this authority. All plants which would refine uranium, which would separate the Uranium 235 from the rest, would be owned and run by this authority. All plants for the production of plutonium would also be owned and run by this authority, which would have the right to prospect everywhere for the material and set up these plants.

This is a very far reaching plan. This is the concept of international organization with teeth in it; an organization that actually owns something and which can do things.

Why was such a drastic suggestion made? Because inspection and treaty-making alone are impracticable and insufficient.

What we need is an organization which goes into the various countries not for a "look-see" examination, but which is in there as an owner and operator. To make a plan of that sort function, you must also offer a constructive, positive side: That is the obtaining of useful power, energy, from atomic fission for peacetime development and scientific purposes.

This is quite possible, and we are likely to see the achievement of this end in the near future.

I want to stress the direct scientific use of the products of atomic disintegration. Many new varieties of atoms are produced as a result of this disintegration, and these atoms are radioactive. Because they are radioactive, their reactions can be traced more easily than they could be otherwise. In fact, many things can be done which were quite impossible up to now. Many processes may ~~be followed~~ exactly by the use of these radioactive atoms which are sometimes called "tracers" because it is so simple to detect them wherever they are. By this means, I am sure, very important developments in chemistry, and particularly in biological chemistry and medicine will be brought about. We will be able to learn things which we could not find out before. I think that we have a real revolution ahead of us through the use of these materials. Therefore, this problem of atomic energy is very much like many of

You never save until you start

Most of us have a savings account. But to make it really mean something calls for planned saving... and a strong mind. One way is to work toward what you want most: a new home, a car, an education for your children, the extra security or opportunity that a "nest egg" provides... Savings can mean so many things... The important thing is to start... and to put aside so much a week—every week. Remember, some are born lucky; smart people save.

THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

A Hand Up For The Worthy In Temporary Straits

"To Grant A Loan Is Greater Than To Give Alms"

By J. H. Coleman,
President Of The Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association

"A loan instead of charity," is the answer of the Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association to those families who find themselves in a temporarily strained financial position. This noble ideal is the basis upon which the Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association was founded some 26 years ago by a number of public-spirited members of our community.

Since then this Agency has become a great comfort to many needy people in their hour of difficulty. There was great need at the time for some specific constructive way to assist people who were unable to borrow from the banks and yet were worthy of assistance. To further this project, they conceived the idea of founding an association which would offer financial help without interest or any other charge to people who found themselves in need of some temporary assistance in the form of a loan so that they would be given an opportunity to help themselves.

From the proceeds of a theatre night held by the Toronto Lodge, Independent Order of Bnai Brith, in 1922, amounting to $3,755.53, and other subscriptions amounting to $1,350, the Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association came into being with an initial capital of $5,105.53. The founders and first directors of the Association were: S. Kronick, N. Phillips, E. Pullan, D. Lavine, A. Cohen, B. Weiss, L. Gelber, D. Dunkelman, H. Mendelsohn, and J. Schwartz. Through the unselfish efforts of these men, and those who later took part in the work, the capital of the Association has grown from year to year until now it is over $70,000.

Samuel Kronick was first president of the Association, and he has taken a very active part in the activities by his untiring efforts to promote the welfare of the organization and increase its power for noble and constructive work in continuously attempting to build up its capital fund. Nathan Phillips was the first vice-president, and he has kept in touch with the activities of the organization through the years, and at the present time he is still an active participant in its administration. E. Pullan was the first treasurer of the Association and has been acting in that very worthy position since its inception. David Lavine was the first investigator and performed nobly in this capacity for many years. He, also, acted as president of the Association for several years and still continues to take an active part in the work. Several of the original founders we have unfortunately lost through death.

Since the first day it opened its doors, this Association has maintained its ideal of offering to those in need the means of self-help with sympathy and the strictest confidence and dignity. During the depression years, this institution upheld the self-respect of many struggling families. When the funds available for loans became exhausted, the organization borrowed money from the banks in order to continue granting "free loans" to those seeking its assistance.

The Association, through the years, has increased its maximum loan from $200 to $500 so that applicants may borrow a substantial sum of money without interest or any other charge, repayable in small weekly installments. With this money they are given an opportunity to make their own way. They become active instead of remaining an inert burden on the community, and what is most important, is that they maintain their self-respect. Who can fail to recognize the great worth of this type of constructive relief? The principle of loaning places a good deal of responsibility on a man. He has the interested advice of his guarantors as well as the committee. Members of the committee, being business men themselves, can assist them with very sound suggestions.

Individuals who are helped come from almost every occupation and walk of life. The loans are given to working-men, trades people, widows, artisans, tailors, merchants, mechanics, storekeepers, college students, teachers, shochtim, salesmen, etc. Borrowers take loans for the requirements and necessities of living, for example: illness expenses, for medical, dental, and hospital services; education of family, for courses in manual, technical, mechanical engineering and scientific training and education; to set up in business; to remain in business; assist relatives in foreign countries; for property taxes and interest to prevent foreclosures and the loss of a life's savings; to help widows maintain their homes; to bridge over temporary unemployment and so reconstruct family life to a position of confidence, stability, and respect.

Loans are obtained by presenting an application to the Loans Committee who meet every week. The entire organization except the office staff is voluntary. The money has been subscribed by public-spirited Jews of the city and the committee which decides on the loan consists of a group of the same type of gentlemen who meet every Tuesday, and hear appeals with compassion and careful consideration. Each loan is endorsed by two responsible parties who act as guarantors on the borrower's note, in order to protect the funds of the Association. A number of borrowers having become well established in business have shown their gratitude to the Association by endowing the capital fund of the Free Loan.

During its lifetime, the organization has had very few campaigns in order to augment its capital fund. This increase has come from the continual and quiet work of the members of the Board of the Association, who, with the welfare of the Association always in their minds, have from time to time approached friends and business associates and prevailed upon them to contribute towards the work of this very worthy organization. This has always been the practice of the administrators of the Association, going about their work in this very unobtrusive manner.

The first campaign was held in January, 1928, with an opening dinner at the Primrose Club at which Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner of Cleveland, Ohio, was the guest speaker. During this campaign over $20,000 was pledged to the capital fund of the Association. It was during this campaign that some of the directors conceived the idea of pledging "trust funds" of $1,000, payable in five annual installments and to remain forever part of the capital fund of the Association. The directors then pledged to make every effort to see that these special trust funds were never impaired by bad or delinquent loans.

Max Rosen, one of the instigators of this idea, was the first to contribute a fund of $1,000. S. Kronick, J. Schwartz, Elly Marks, and Nathan Smith quickly followed this lead. A special fund was raised during the evening of the dinner in honour of the president, Samuel Kronick, to be known as the "Samuel Kronick Honour Fund." totalling $1,000. This was given by those present at the dinner, many of whom had already subscribed various amounts.

The next campaign was held in 1934 at which Rabbi Brickner was again invited to be guest speaker. During this campaign, an additional $15,000 was raised towards the capital fund of the Free Loan. Aside from these two campaigns, no public drive was ever made by the Free Loan. It is very encouraging, indeed, to review the work of the directors of the Association in building up the capital fund from its very meagre beginning to its very substantial amount at the present time without having recourse each year to a widely publicized campaign for funds.

The idea of establishing memorial funds was first conceived by the Board of Directors who felt that no more fitting manner could be found to honour the memory of some dear departed one than to dedicate a "memorial fund" to the blessed memory of that beloved one. Inanimate stone and fragrant flowers, while undoubtedly beautiful, carry no useful results to the living who require a loan. Thus the directors felt that a "memorial Fund" is a living vital testimonial of love.

The second World War, which ended in 1945, also had repercussions in the work of the Associa-

The Jews beat the Arabs.

Out of the concentration camps, ghettoes, banks, courtrooms, theaters and factories of Europe the Chosen People had assembled and had won their first great military victory since Judas Maccabeus* beat the Syrian Nicanor at Adasa 2,109 years ago.

Their success has been hidden from the world by U.N. maneuvering and by a confusing war of a hundred skirmishes with no real battles. Although, in years to come, fighting might break out again & again, its probable pattern was fixed: the Jews were too tough, too smart and too vigorous for the divided and debilitated Arab world to conquer.

As the U.N. truce settled on Palestine last week it seemed probable that the new state of Israel, already recognized by 15 nations, would seek and get U.N. membership at next fall's meeting in Paris. It was time to stop pondering the settled question of whether there would be a Jewish state, time to start asking what kind of nation Israel was.

The world—every corner of it—knew Jews, but the Israelis were not the Jews that most of the world knew. Two millenniums of sorrow and insecurity in a hostile world had put their stamp on the character of this people. In Israel, a few years of struggle to build a state, a few months at the center of the world stage, a few weeks of battle had superimposed another, bolder stamp. That the Israelis' victory had come just after the worst of a thousand persecutions, that it had been won by those who survived the slaughter of 6,000,000, made the newly minted Jewish character gleam brighter.

Political Bends. The new Israelis walked with a confident swagger along the beach front at Tel Aviv. They talked confidently — indeed, stridently — of a state of ten million, not necessarily confined to the present boundaries of Israel. It was a bad joke, and also a sober observation, that the idea of Drang nach Osten lived in the new nation of Hitler's victims. As they looked around them at a disorganized and unproductive Arab world, the Israelis showed some of the reactions of the prewar Germans looking around a disorganized and unproductive Europe.

Jewish traditions of peace and democracy run deep, but the Israelis had been transferred so quickly from the depths of Europe to the heights of superiority in the Middle East that they could not escape the political equivalent of deep-sea divers' bends. The new blood of nationalism ran fast and hot in Israel; sometimes it seemed to be gushing out on the ground. Pleading for more understanding and tolerance of Israel, one sympathetic observer warned: "This could become an ugly little Spartan state."

Israel's present leaders are determined that their nation will not take that path. Foremost and most determined among them is David Ben-Gurion, Premier and Defense Minister, labor leader and philosopher, hardheaded, unsociable and abrupt politician, a prophet who carries a gun.

Mystical Ends. Ben-Gurion lives on a typical Tel Aviv boulevard, in a two-story stucco house, distinguished from its neighbors only by the soldiers with Sten guns at the entrance. In his library about a third of the books are on military history and tactics; next in number are books about Greek philosophy and Buddha, his current study. (Zionists all over the world scout up rare Buddhist books for Ben-Gurion.)

In a ground floor study, its windows bricked up against air raids, Ben-Gurion recently sat and answered a reporter's questions with terse frankness.

"Can you conquer the Arabs?"

"Against the Arabs we are one against 40."

"Won't Israel grow?"

"There are eleven million Jews in the world. I don't say that all of them will come here, but I expect several million, and with natural increase I can quite imagine a Jewish state of ten million."

"Can that many be accommodated within the U.N. partition boundaries of Israel?"

"I doubt it."

Then Ben-Gurion dropped his matter-of-fact manner. The labor politician was replaced by the prophet. A dreamer's stare veiled his blue eyes. The room was small but his voice throbbed loudly, as if speaking to multitudes against the winds on Mount Carmel.

"We would not have taken on this war merely for the purpose of enjoying this tiny state. There have been only two great peoples: the Greeks and the Jews. Perhaps the Greeks were even greater than the Jews, but now I can see no sign of that old greatness in the modern Greeks. Maybe, when the present process is finished we too will degenerate, but I see no sign of degeneration at present."

His voice took on a deeper tone: "Suffering makes a people greater, and we have suffered much. We had a message to give the world, but we were overwhelmed, and the message was cut off in the middle. In time there will be millions of us—becoming stronger and stronger—and we will complete the message."

"What is the message?" the reporter asked.

"Our policy must be the unity of the human race. The world is divided into two blocs. We consider that the United Nations' ideal is a Jewish ideal."

At that point, Ben-Gurion descended from Mount Carmel. "Perhaps," he said apologetically, "this may sound rather chauvinistic."

Helpful Push. In less exalted moods, Ben-Gurion goes quietly and industriously about his work of running Israel. His work day of twelve hours is broken by a frugal lunch at a small hotel with other government workers. Colleagues call him by his surname or, occasionally, B.G. During the fighting he slept at a boarding house near his office. Nowadays, he goes home to his wife, a nurse from Minsk whom he met and married in Brooklyn. Ben-Gurion has no close personal friends, but he is widely respected for his ability and his unassuming simplicity. Last week, on a road near Tel Aviv, a truck ground to a stop and the driver signaled for help. Ben-Gurion and a young aide happened to be in a car behind. The 63-year-old Premier of Israel got out and helped push the truck while his young companion stood guard with a rifle to keep down possible Arab snipers.

His son Amos, who was a major in the British Army, later a Haganah fighter, recently married a British Christian. Ben-Gurion did not hold her faith against her; he gathered up an armload of Jewish histories and Zionist tracts, mailed them to her so that she would understand her adopted country.

The Going Up. Few people understand Israel as well as David Ben-Gurion. His life tells the story of Israel's development. He was born, the fourth of eleven children, in 1884, at Plonsk, Poland, then part of Russia. As he grew up, all Russia was stirring. Jews especially felt the tension of gathering storms. Zionism, the dream of the great Theodor Herzl, captured young David's imagination. So did Socialism. He decided to go to Palestine, where other Jews had preceded him. They belonged to the First Aliyah (literally, a going up, a wave); most of them were "gentlemen farmers" who hired Arabs to till their land and to guard their property. But Arab guards proved unreliable. The men of the First Aliyah hired some of the immigrants of the Second Aliyah, including David, to replace them. Ben-Gurion came to Palestine at a turning point in Zionist history. Such "practical" Zionists as British Chemist Chaim Weizmann (who later won British promises to support a Jewish National Home in Palestine) had persuaded Zionists to speed up the development of Palestine without waiting for a political title to the country.

Handing Over. Ben-Gurion took three steps of the utmost practical and symbolic importance to Zionism: 1) he organized his fellow watchmen into a defense force, the germ of Haganah, the army that beat the Arabs this year; 2) realizing that forces outside Palestine would be decisive, he went to Turkey, which then held the country, to study law; 3) he then came to the U.S. to help organize the Pioneer Movement, which was based on the sound notion that if Jews were ever to get a solid footing in Palestine, they would have to work the land themselves.

One of the most dramatic and significant elements in Israel's story was the "declassing" of immigrants, the transformation of professional men and tradesmen into farmers and factory workers.

now for a Dow
DOW BREWERY
BP-156 A

Ben-Gurion's hand was in that extraordinary development.

He went back to Palestine as a corporal with Allenby's army in 1917 and then, under the British Mandate, organized the Labor party and the Histadrut (General Federation of Jewish Labor), over both of which he still exerts a dominant influence. Looking back, Ben-Gurion recently said: "We did not hesitate to hand over to the labor community the cherished institutions and treasured economic enterprises that were begun by small select groups inspired by a pioneering zeal — by the few men of the Second Aliyah."

"Sneh on Their Boots." The Histadrut, to which the men of the Second Aliyah turned over Zionism's economic heart, is unique among labor unions as Israel is unique among states. The Zionist socialists, having no nation, could not pursue a program of nationalizing industry. Instead, they turned over more and more functions to the Histadrut until it became a state within a state, a vast trust as well as a labor union. The Histadrut is one of Israel's biggest banks and the main local life insurance company. Histadrut controls 96 per cent of all transportation. (It costs between $1,800 and $4,500 to join the bus drivers' union.) Nearly half of Israel's Jews belong to the Histadrut, which controls directly or indirectly 20% of the country's economy.

Most of the farming is collectivized, because socialist Zionists wanted to work the land as intensively as possible, with Jewish labor. The collectives have another advantage: many are stockaded forts, built to protect pioneer settlers from Arab attacks.

The peculiar socialism of the Histadrut and the collective farms does not lead Israel toward Communist sympathies. Quite the contrary. Ben-Gurion's Labor party, which dominates the present coalition government, is consciously but cautiously anti-Communist. To its left stands the United Workers party; in the left wing of this group is a sinister opportunist named Moshe Sneh, who plays the Kremlin's game. As one Israeli punned: "If the Russians ever come to Israel, it will be with Sneh (Yiddish for snow) on their boots."

On Ben-Gurion's right lurks the Irgun, which calls him a dictator because he wants to prevent Irgun from operating a private army. The Irgunists are intense nationalists and "revisionists," which in practical present terms means they are gangsters and expansionists, itching to carry to the fight into Arab territory.

"Blow Your Nose." The new nation is further divided by the differing nationalitics and social backgrounds of its citizens. Each aliyah had its own characteristics and dreams for the new state. The men of the Second Aliyah are still on top in the government, but in the army and among the people, the sabras (literally: cacti) the native-born, are coming to the fore. Palestinian climate has played a strange trick on the sabras. They run to the big-boned, blue-eyed, blond athlete type associated with anti-Semitic persecutions.

In other lands the German Jews tend to look upon themselves as the aristocrats of Jewry (although they give precedence to the Sephardic families from Spain and Portugal). In Palestine the recent German aliyah is looked down upon and made the butt of the same kind of joke that German Jews in the U.S. used to hurl at their Russian brethren.

Israel calls the German Jew a yecki (roughly: squarehead). laughs at his naiveté. Many of the yecki are physicians (of that great, devoted band of German-Jewish doctors) and they have a hard time adjusting to the land. Many try chicken farming, going about it in that highly scientific Teuton way which makes the Polish and Russian Israelis guffaw. They say that when one yecki found a sick chicken he sent all the way to India for a serum, inoculated every one of his flock. They tell of a yecki with an old dry cow who asked a Polish Jew to sell it for him. The Pole found a Russian Jew to whom he said: "This is a fine young cow: she gives six liters of milk every day." The yecki, standing by, said: "Well, well, that I didn't know: I'd like to buy her back." To new arrivals the Eastern Jews say: "Did you come here from conviction—or from Germany?"

The people of each aliyah may speak their own language for the first two years, after that are expected to switch to Hebrew.* A means lovelier haircolor!

OFF WITH THE OLD
ON WITH THE NEW

Don't put up with faded, graying streaks:
Take color in your stride —
and it's easy to take when it's Roux haircolor.
Always natural looking, yet so eye-catching;
Always glowing with light, yet so much softer. In this season, when color is truly important, it's no place more so than in your hair. One Roux treatment brings it to every visible strand.

DON'T MISS THOSE MALLARDS!

Now the first sharp tang of autumn seasons the summer air, the enthusiastic hunter is getting his hunting clothes out of the mothballs and planning his first duck hunt of the season. There's nothing to equal the thrill of seeing that first flight of ducks and there's nothing like the satisfaction of knowing that, even on the chilliest morning your Johnson Sea-Horse will start with a flick of the Ready-Pull starter. You'll bless the day you bought a Sea-Horse when you discover how downright DEPENDABLE it is in all kinds of weather. Frosty mornings, driving rainstorms have no effect on a Johnson. Johnson Sea-Horses are built to stand up to tough going . . . to give sparkling performance that you can always count on.

This built-in dependability has made Johnsons famous across the continent . . . and Johnson has continent-wide sales and service too, right at hand when you want it . . . with factory-trained mechanics and genuine Johnson parts to keep your motor in top running condition for years of pleasure ahead.

See your Johnson dealer today and select the model that's right for you. Sportsmen everywhere agree that Johnson Sea-Horses are tops in outboard motors.

Holiday Greetings

BEACH FOUNDRY LIMITED once again wishes to extend to their Jewish friends and customers Holiday Greetings on this occasion of the Jewish New Year.

Although production on many lines of our manufacture increased substantially during the past year, our efforts were not sufficient to cope with the ever-increasing demand for Beach products, which to-day enjoy a truly enviable reputation for Style, Quality, and unexcelled Value.

This year, with steel and other supplies becoming more available and with increased production efficiency, there should be more goods available for dealer distribution, than at any time heretofore, so please be patient — we are doing our utmost to serve you.

Good Will In Action Made Brotherhood Work

By Bernard Postal, Director Of Public Information Of The National Jewish Welfare Board

Many preach brotherhood but not all practice it. Speeches and resolutions extolling interfaith amity and meetings to further interracial good will are plentiful. But the gap between preachment and practice remains dishearteningly wide. Nevertheless, the number of deeds of brotherhood is greater than would appear from the sporadic rashes of racial and religious antipathies that scar the national scene.

Because bad news, in the journalistic sense, is bigger news than good news, deeds of brotherhood seldom make the headlines. To record some of the more dramatic of such incidents in the United States, and not to prove or disprove anything, this writer has for the past 15 years compiled an annual compendium of such events. Traditionally, this digest has been called Good Will In Action.

Most heartening of the year's good will in action incidents were those involving young people. When vandals defaced a giant poster of the Los Angeles' United Jewish Welfare Fund, 100 members of the youth groups of the city's Congregational Churches assembled at the site of the 70-foot poster and spent half a day re-landscaping the grounds and repairing the damage to the poster. Thirty-five Negro children in Jamaica, New York, adopted a Jewish youngster in France who now receives a monthly gift package from her American friends.

Harvard University launched its own marshal plan this year when the 1948 graduating class elected as its marshals, permanent class officers, a Protestant, a Catholic, a Jew, and a Negro. At more than 150 Christian youth summer camps throughout the U.S., young Protestants of all denominations learned at first hand about Judaism from visiting rabbis assigned by the Jewish Chatauqua Society. In hundreds of communities, Americans of all ages saw how brotherhood in practice can build a better America when "Make Way for Youth," a 20-minute sound film, unreeled a dramatic story. Produced by the Youth Division of the National Social Welfare Assembly Board, this striking film showed how racial and religious tensions can be overcome through democratic education for youth.

The public schools, too, continued to make encouraging progress in teaching good will in action. For the first time in the history of Columbus, Ohio, a Hanukah pageant was presented in an elementary school as part of the regular assembly program. In Duluth, Hanukah Menorahs were lit in the city's 14 elementary and high schools as a prelude to simultaneous Hanukah and Christmas observances. Christian and Jewish displays stood side by side in the public library of Oshkosh, Wis., as part of a unique exhibit related to the JWB-sponsored Jewish Book Month and the observance of Christmas.

A most remarkable expression of good will in action was the frequency with which Christians voluntarily contributed to Jewish causes and the succession of Jewish benefactions to Christian agencies. The tiny Jewish community of Greenville, Miss., topped its 1948 UJA quota of $30,000 thanks to a unique and unsolicited Christian campaign. It was Hodding Carter, Pultizer prize winning editor, who sparked the drive by urging Greenville's Christians to help. The first contribution was ten dollars from a Negro Methodist printer. An Irish Catholic business man was next. Before it was over the total was $37,500, of which $8,500 had come from non-Jews. When the Protestant churches in the same area started a drive to load a "friendship barge," under the auspices of the Church World Services, the first donor was Joe Weinberg, Greenville's UJA chairman.

In New York City some kind of a precedent was set when Frank Scarvini, a Catholic businessman, was named a director of the wholesale drug and cosmetic division of the Greater New York UJA. He is also a contributor to Zionist agencies. Just before Joseph Goldstein, a member of JWB's board of directors, retired as president of the Rochester Jewish Young Men's and Women's Association, he led a campaign among the JY's membership in support of the joint building fund of the YMCA-YWCA. The Roman Catholic Church of St. Helena, in the Parkchester neighborhood of the Bronx, sponsored a benefit basketball game for a Jewish family and a Protestant family, survivors of two city firemen who died in a warehouse blaze.

Joseph Rubin, of Effingham, Ill., who died last year, bequeathed $500 to each of the 22 Christian churches in his community. Matching this bequest was the $5,000 left to the UJA by Mrs. Hattie R. A. Eckhardt, a non-Jewess, of Boulder, Colorado. The Clara White Mission, of Jacksonville, Florida, is a Negro relief society. But during the UJA campaign, Miss Eartha M. M. White, president of the Society, sent a contribution from her organization to the Jacksonville Jewish Community Council.

What is probably the most unusual good will in action incident in many years enabled Brooklyn's historic Hanson Place Central Methodist Church to acquire a set of carillonic bells. After the congregation had heard the bells, the pastor announced that much as the church would like to own them, no funds were available. Three days later a member of the congregation phoned that he would underwrite one-third the cost. His business partner, a Jew, offered another third. And the balance was contributed by the Catholic brother of the Protestant who had made the original contribution. The first brother gave his funds in memory of his father, who was a Protestant, and the second gave in memory of his mother, who was a Catholic. A plaque in the church vestibule records the story for posterity in these words:

"The interfaith carillonic bells in this church were presented by Mr. and Mrs. Martin V. Silby in memory of their parents, Harry and Anna Silby and Abraham and Amelia Sperling, devout Jews, and by Clifford J. Feistel in honor of his mother, Anna Feistel, sincere Catholic, and by Lester Feistel, Jr., in memory of his father, Lester Feistel, Sr., faithful Protestant."

Congregation Brith Shalom, in upper Manhattan, which has no synagogue of its own, went all out to help raise $100,000 needed to save the building of the 192-year-old Second Presbyterian Church. Brith Shalom has been using the church's facilities since 1938. During the Revolutionary War when the church was located on Cedar Street, Jews helped repair the church after it was damaged by Hessian soldiers.

But good will in action last year meant more than just fund-raising. The Texas Department of the Jewish War Veterans mobilized its members for a unique deed of brotherhood by making them available as replacements for Christians who found it necessary to work on Christmas. Letters offering this service were sent to all business firms which remained open on Christmas. The Jewish volunteers accepted no compensation for their work which enabled Christians to spend the holiday with their families. Hundreds of non-Jewish men and women and children, left destitute by the Columbia River flood last spring, were housed and fed in the Portland, Oregon, Jewish Community Center, one of the affiliates of JWB. The same kind of good will in action was evidenced by the Portland, Maine, Jewish Community Center during last fall's disastrous forest fires.

Something new in the way of a Passover Seder was provided by the Rev. Richard W. Knost of the Universalist Church, Brewton, Ala. The only two Jewish families in the town belong to Temple Beth-El, Pensacola, Fla., which is 60 miles away. This has prevented these families from participating in synagogue life and their children lacked a Jewish education. Last Passover, the Reverend Knost suggested a Seder to his Jewish neighbors. They didn't know much about a Seder so Dr. Knost explained it to them. Ultimately the Seder was held in the home of one of the Jewish families, with the Christian clergyman explaining the Passover symbols and reading the Haggadah while his wife chanted the melodies and his son asked the four questions.

As a memorial to Dr. O. W. Bushgen, pastor of the Westminister Presbyterian Church, who died half an hour before his scheduled speech at an interfaith rally at Temple Bnai Israel, Elizabeth, N.J., the Temple sponsored a concert to raise funds for rebuilding two Presbyterian churches destroyed by fire. When the Unitarian Church of Sioux City, Iowa, was razed by fire, the Sioux City Jewish Community Center made part of its facilities available to the church. Christian churches did the same thing in Richmond, Va., when fire destroyed the Jewish Community Center in that city.

The Metamorphosis Of Hymie

By Cyril Caplan

Hidden dynamite was under the surface of things. In this year of 1938 an ox wagon was slowly winding its way from Cape Town across koppie and veld to Pretoria. Men were growing beards and feeling in the land was borrowing heat from the simmering upheaval in Europe, for its own arcana of explosive. Men walked about as bottled volcanoes . . . eruption was certain. And naturally, the eruption took place in Johannesburg. No surprise in that. Johannesburg erupts periodically.

On that Thursday night Hymie Kotlin — the most inoffensive of men — stepped out of his little flat in the heart of the city to go for a walk. His thoughts were far from the ill-boding posters of the newspapers: "Chamberlain Flies to Munich"—and the Afrikaans poster, "Ossewa-Brandwag Dreigement." His thoughts were indeed personal and tinged with anxiety. Certain stomach pains, some smart jabs in the left side—indigestion? Or something more serious?

Hymie lived in a small world recognizable to those who know the square-mile forest of brick and concrete that is the heart of Johannesburg. He was one of those Jewish bachelors, past the prime of life (in his forties), who live strange lonely lives in the forest, changing their restaurants periodically, indulging in the modest pleasure of an occasional game of billiards at the S.A.P. Club, miserable on Sundays in the City's Sabbath bleakness, remote from family, always slightly fearful about laundry not arriving on the following Monday, and intoxicated by Jewish protest meetings.

He was a small man, just topping the five-foot mark — and thin, pathetically thin. Clean-shaven, neat, he nevertheless had the stamp of defeated life upon him. He belonged to a small minority — the Jew without resilience. The ghetto, the crushing burden of poverty, the life haunted by fear of Cossack or illiterate peasantry, or Czar, did not belong to his personal history — but he had inherited its result. He was born vanquished, and lived the vanquished life. He shrank from life. He had aspired to accountancy and had eventually rested content as a bookkeeper.

He was shy with women. Once he had had ideas about marriage, but two or three unhappy approaches on the threshold of courtship had knocked all the fight out of him. There was one girl, Dora, who in the lofty flights of his dreams, he still hoped to marry. He had been to her home twice this past year, and then courage had deserted him and he had scrambled back into his lonely isolation.

So he lived alone in his fourth-floor bachelor flat, breakfasting at the Golden Ray Cafe, lunching at George's Cafe, supping at the Universal and dreaming of Dora. He devoured the newspapers without thought, considered the editorials in the Rand Daily Mail were wonderful—"the editor must be a very clever man"—and followed the tragedy of Jewry in the pages of the Zionist Record. He was not very articulate and could never have spoken of the terrible, defeated hunger for life and companionship that sometimes plunged him into the very bowels of despair. Now and then he turned on himself and inwardly confessed himself a failure and nonentity.

On that Thursday night, with those stomach pains and those smart jabs worrying him, he walked along the streets. How was he to know that this was to be one of Johannesburg's explosive nights, that there was to be "rioting in the city," as the newspapers had it next morning? Some men with beards went wild that night. Mobs ran across the streets. Now and then the excitement was pierced by a cry, "Daar's 'n Jood!" And it so happened that little Hymie Kotlin was one of the Israelites referred to. Down he went, a mob upon him, a foot on his face, a sense of suffocation upon him . . . a crack on the head. He lost consciousness.

He came out of hospital three weeks later fully recovered . . . and strangely enough, less defeated. In other circumstances the assault upon him might have come like a hand squeezing the last drop of water out of an already dry sponge. But the sponge, quite mysteriously, filled up. It swelled his pride to know that he had been involved in a big riot, that he had come through it battered, but unbowed and alive. He had been in a battle line, from which survival was indeed achievement. "Stronger I am than I give myself credit," he told himself approvingly.

Those little mysterious pains in the stomach and those smart jabs appeared nothings to the man from the battle line. Achievement plus a bandage round his head, most certain to arouse a woman's sympathy, gave him courage—at least, courage enough to telephone Dora at her place of work and ask if he could take her to the bioscope that night. She said "Yes", and the blood ran through him.

"I thought you were dead, Hymie," she said.

"Do you think they can kill me so easily?" he asked, with a secret ecstasy. It was only when he replaced the telephone that he noticed the man in his office. A detective. There was talk of an identification parade. Would he recognize any of his assailants?

"What recognize? Who recognize?" he gestured. The chapter was dead, fossilized. "Dead, I am? I'm all right, all right," and then, with sudden, fussy movements of paper on his desk—

"A big appoint-e-ment I have tonight, a big appoint-e-ment."

The detective stared.

"Then you don't want . . . ?"

"No, no."

"No charge against anybody?"

"Charge? A whole day in court must I spend? A whole day I should waste?"

The detective shrugged.

"O.K.," he said. "Cheerio."

"A big appoint-e-ment," muttered Hymie, hurrying, as the Jew always does, out of the past into the brighter future.

This story is from Jewish Affairs, of Johannesburg, South Africa.

GOOD WILL IN ACTION

fighting men of Israel last year were many non-Jews. A Jewish flag and flagpole were presented to Temple Bnai Israel, Sheffield, Ala., by the First Presbyterian Church, in honor of the establishment of the state of Israel and in appreciation of the Temple's generosity in allowing the church to use its quarters for many months. When the Beth El Center, Fargo, N.D., burned, the First Methodist Church, the Gethsemane Cathedral and the First Congregational Church all offered their buildings to the Synagogue. In Portsmouth, N.H., Temple Israel's building was used by the Unitarian-Universalist Church when its own quarters were destroyed by fire. Historic Old Swedes Church, Wilmington, Delaware, included a production of the oratorio, "The Eternal Prophet," based on the life of the Hebrew prophet Amos, by the chorus of the YM-YWHA, in exercises marking the dedication of the Christina Community Center.

These heart-warming examples of good will in action, which could be multiplied many-fold, demonstrate that while most Americans preach brotherhood and many believe in it, some of them really practiced it last year.

and cooperate continuously with it in providing such care for children. At all times, wherever possible, the Department seeks to re-knit natural family ties and to re-establish children in their own homes because of its belief that the human personality can best be molded and shaped by growing up within its own natural environment.

Problems of parental relationships to growing children receive our attention and help. Insofar as possible, parents are helped to find a better way of dealing with the problems presented by their growing youngsters. Special needs of children are met through referral to other resources, where they exist.

This Department also assists unmarried parents to work through their complicated life situation. Necessary personal and medical care is made available to such individuals while they are helped to make the crucial decision of keeping the child or relinquishing it for adoption. Adoption service is therefore another specialized function of the agency.

A close liaison relationship with the Juvenile Court is maintained in situations where we can serve in working through probation plans for pre-delinquent or delinquent children. Contact with children or youth who require special institutional care is also carried on so that their bonds with family and community may be preserved for their eventual return and adjustment.

In addition to these services, we also conduct a summer camp in the Laurentians, Sunshine Camp, for the purpose of enabling children in need of such holidays to profit from an experience in the countryside. In cooperation with the Jewish Coordinating Camp Committee of Montreal, the facilities of other camps are made available to the agency's clients.

SERVICE TO REFUGEES AND NEWCOMERS

With the influx of refugee youth that began in September 1947, the agencies have served as a vital professional arm of the Canadian Jewish Congress in receiving, resettling and supervising youth who have been brought to Montreal. The agencies' program in this respect is a vivid example of the combined efforts of the entire community working cooperatively with its social services in accomplishing an heroic task, which at this writing includes the placement and accommodation into the community of 350 youth.

The full story of this humanitarian project can be said to represent every aspect of what enters into healthy Jewish communal life, and in many ways touches on all the activities of all the agencies which benefit from the Combined Jewish Appeal and Federation. Effective September 1948, the welfare needs of all new immigrants resident in Montreal for six months or longer will be met by these agencies, whether they have come under the various occupational schemes such as tailors, furriers, or have been brought under private auspices.

The method by which the varied helping activities and services of the agencies are conducted is known as case work. By this is meant that people in need are helped on a private, confidential basis with due regard to their individual differences and needs as human beings. Trained, professional social workers are employed by the agencies. They are experienced and understand the social and psychological problems of the people who are in pain and in need of assistance.

Every client of these agencies maintains his right of choosing what is best for himself so that he may achieve a personally satisfying and socially more constructive way of living with the aid of his social worker who provides the agencies' services. The philosophy which governs social work is based on a truly democratic appreciation of individuals, whose dignity and self-esteem must be preserved and nurtured. In accepting without judgment the problems of individuals who need help, the social worker is able more effectively to help them help themselves. These are some of the components that enter into the skills of the agencies, without which their services would lack the human and understanding elements that make it possible for people to use help purposefully.

Beset as we all are by the crises of our time, the fact that within agencies such as the Jewish Child Welfare Bureau and the Family Welfare Department of the Baron de Hirsch Institute there exists a source of stability and meaningful help to our fellow men who would otherwise founder, indicates a wholesome aspect in the life of Montreal Jewry.

the other opportunities which were presented to man. You have on one hand something which can do a tremendous amount of good and be a real bond of unity between peoples, and on the other hand, something which can do incalculable harm and wipe out our whole civilization as we know it. That is, it has the strength of the weakness, and the weakness of the strength. But it presents us now with possiblities which were never known before.

followed by the invention of a new defense. However, we were never before in the history of mankind presented with an advance in the art of destruction as great as this. There is no specific defense for the bomb, and so great is its power, that ordinary counter measures are simply ineffective.

It would not help at all if a bomb intended for Manhattan Island were dropped on Staten Island. The damage would still be very severe. And you cannot cope by ordinary means with a surprise attack of two hundred airplanes dispersed over a large area at the same time unless, in peace time, you set up an organization which was bigger than our war time organization, unless you have millions of men under arms all the time, drilled all the time, unless we diverted the major part of our national effort to defense. None of us wants to contemplate a life of that sort.

The point I wish to make is that we have here a very great opportunity. It is not an opportunity which we should pass by. Many people will wonder what we can do if Russia will not go along. For our own security, for ourselves and for our children, we should not be stopped by that. We should insist on pursuing this opportunity. It is what I call "militant pacifism." Nobody can stay out of such an agreement.

As soon as the American people are convinced that it is necessary to set this thing up internationally, to set it up with teeth; as soon as the American people are convinced that they really want security, that they are not going to take a chance on their future, and that they are not going to sacrifice anything, we must insist that there will be no atomic bomb war. If we get into that mood and make that clear to the nations of the world, I am sure there will be no atomic bomb war.

On the other hand, if we fail to make the best of this opportunity and let it slide, not only our very existence and future, but everything which we regard as America will be at stake. Everything which we regard as unique to ourselves will go, and will go very quickly.

My feeling is and has been that in spite of the act we intend to put on as a people, that we are a people with a lot of sense. We did not get where we are today by imitating the comics. I think that the people of this country will realize the point. The very fact that we have a definite policy gives me a great deal of encouragement, but this in itself is not enough, unless each and every one of us in his own way helps it along; gets a fundamental realization of what it means for himself, for his family, for his friends.

What we have to do is so radical, so different from everything that has gone before, that we cannot expect somebody to present a plan complete in all details and to follow it out. What we have to have is a well-thought-out, well argued-out plan. We must apply it gradually, but not too gradually because there is not too much time.

I am only one of many. Almost all of us who were there on July 16th and have seen this thing and have felt its power and its influence will not be the same hereafter. We are like people who have been given a message to carry, and we cannot rest unless we carry the message to others.

tion. The organization was called upon to make loans to discharged members of the Armed Forces in helping to set them up in business or re-establishing them in civilian life. In conjunction with the United Jewish Relief Agencies, the Association has given loans amounting to thousands of dollars to refugees in order to help them establish households in this city, and in some cases to assist them to set up in small businesses. At the present time, the Association is called upon to give loans to those families seeking to bring over relatives from the camps of Europe. The Association is looked to for help in rehabilitating these poor people who have been rescued from a miserable existence, and lend them adequate assistance to build up a new life in our country.

The objective of the present Board of Directors is: To greatly increase the capital fund of the Free Loan in order to fortify it against the difficult times that may lie ahead of us. This institution deserves well of the bounty and wealth of the city of Toronto, and the directors feel it their duty to earnestly suggest when people make their wills, that this Association be, indeed, remembered, and that they provide legacies and bequests to perpetuate their own memory, or that of some dear departed relative.

There is no more practical way in the realm of philanthropy to perpetuate one's memory than by establishing a fund, because all such contributions remain capital forever. Owing to very careful management, this institution still has every dollar it ever received, whether the contribution was a legacy or a donation. The present officers of the Association are: honorary president, M. Wolfe; past president, D. Lavine; president, J. H. Coleman; honorary vice-president, J. Wiener; first vice-president, J. Winberg; second, J. Cohen; third, A. Lavine; treasurer, E. Pullan.

dead language, a language of scholarship and liturgy for centuries, Hebrew has been revived and made the official language of Israel. In earlier days, some of the old folks were shocked to hear Hebrew used in everyday speech. When a mother scolded, "Little Ittomar, blow your nose," in the tongue of the prophets, oldsters winced.

"Buses Will Run." Hebrew will help hold the nation together. The world outside Israel (including many U.S. Zionists) expected the main cement of the new state to be the Jewish religion, preserved through centuries of vicissitudes. In Israel this seems to have lost its validity. When the Promised

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR DIVORCE

NOTICE is hereby given that ROBERT WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Office Clerk, of the City of Montreal, District of Montreal, in the County of Hochelaga, in the Province of Quebec, will apply to the Parliament of Canada, at the present or next session thereof, for a Bill of Divorce from his wife, NORMA KATHLEEN HIGGINBOTHAM, Housewife, of the City of Montreal, District of Montreal, County of Hochelaga, Province of Quebec, on the ground of adultery.

DATED AT MONTREAL, in the Province of Quebec, this 1st day of September, 1948.

SAMUEL GREENBLATT,
Attorney for Applicant,
1010 St. Catherine St. West
Suite 340,
Montreal, Que.

Land was the unpaid balance of a divine I.O.U., when they lived among more or less hostile Gentiles, religion was a far more vital force than it is today in Israel. The Jew is supposed to wear a hat; in Tel Aviv, young men risk sunstroke to go hatless. Waiters at the Armon Hotel in Tel Aviv—have no qualms about offering guests bacon. Throughout the country dietary laws are widely breached.

The constitution to be written next fall will make a point of separating church and state. Ben-Gurion and other leaders rarely turn up at synagogues. Jews are not supposed to travel in vehicles on the Sábbath but they do today in Israel. Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok, a brisk, urbane statesman, did not even wait for a reporter to ask him about it. Said Shertok: "And if you're going to ask whether the trains and buses are going to run on the Sabbath, I can tell you right now—they are."

The old Jews of Europe had to wear long curls; many young Israelis of Tel Aviv favor crew cuts in the American—or Prussian—style. Israeli girls, who run to the buxom bucolic type, stride the streets in slacks or shorts. Many have gone into the CHEN, Israeli version of the WAC. The young people turn their backs on sentimental, nostalgic, masochistic traditional Jewish art. Such plays as the great Yiddish drama, The Dybbuk, draw an almost unanimous "it stinks" from the sabras. Their strong, bronzed young hands have no tendency to rend their open-necked sport shirts in grief.

Victims of History. If not religion, what will hold Israel together? Today fear of the Arabs performs for the Israelis the same unifying function that Gentile persecution and discrimination performed during the Dispersion. The Arabs, as Ben-Gurion noted, are 40 to one Israeli. But the Jewish superiority over the Arabs is not just a figment of Israeli imagination; it is a fact. Israel has probably the highest percentage of skilled labor and executive experience of any people in the world; by comparison, the Arabs are near the bottom of the scale.

The Western world tends to think of the Arab as a falcon-eyed warrior on a white horse. That Arab is still around, but he is far less numerous than the disease-ridden wretches who lie in the hot streets, too weak, sick and purposeless to roll over into the shade.

The Arabs, no less than the Jews, are victims of history. Four centuries of Turkish rule hurt them at least as badly as a decade of Nazi-ism hurt the Jews. Now, in their morning of independence, the Arabs have suffered defeat at the hands of a small, despised people. It rankles.

Yet only in peace between Jews and Arabs is there much hope for either. If the Israelis are forced into many years of war they may indeed become "an ugly little Spartan state." Their wiser leaders know this. Such men as Ben-Gurion see the Israel of tomorrow as an industrial, trading and organizing nation leading the whole Middle East to new levels of productivity.

But how can the Jews now come to terms with the Arab world whose insecure leaders do not dare cross up the people they have inflamed against Israel? The Jews' hopes of a deal are pinned on Abdullah of Transjordan, whose British paid and trained Arab Legion bolsters up his position as Arab spokesman and leaves him free to compromise. Ironically, it is the British subsidy to Abdullah (against which the Zionists rail) that offers the best chance of attaining the understanding with the Arabs essential to Israel's future peace and commerce.

Need for a Talent. If the Israel issue plunges the Arab world into further chaos and thus gives the Russians a chance to gain influence with the Arab mobs, World War III becomes much nearer. Ben-Gurion, for one, has little hope that Israel would survive such a war. "We would be crushed," he says simply.

Israelis who do not understand the danger of too much success are impatient at British and U.S. concern for Arab friendship. They shout "Oil!" as if nothing but profits were involved. The same oil, which the Arabs can shut off, is an essential part of the world's hope of recovery; without that recovery, the dream of Israel as a prosperous trading nation cannot come true. The same oil is an essential part of the defense of the West. Without that defense Israel, a democratic state, is lost.

So the Israeli political position is a highly delicate one. They may resist Abdullah — but must be sure not to crush him. They may beg the U.S. for help — but must be sure that help does not hopelessly alienate the Arabs. They may snarl at the British, but must remember that the British want essentially what Israel has to have —stability in the Middle East.

In their long and brilliant history the Jews have displayed great genius for religion, ethics, husbandry, commerce, literature, music and art. The one skill they have never shown as a people is a talent for politics. That is the talent they need now. Perhaps the Israeli has it.

VITAMINS AND VITALITY

Bad eating habits are the enemy of beauty. That feeling of vitality—a clear skin, bright eyes, glossy hair—depend to a large extent on the food you eat. It isn't what you eat now and then that counts, but what you eat every day at every meal. A balanced diet may be a better beauty aid than many cosmetics.

HEBREW UNIVERSITY IS AIDED BY CANADIAN FRIENDS' CHAPTERS

In a message received by Allan Bronfman, of Montreal, national president of the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University, the government of Israel transmitted a resolution adopted by them to the Hebrew University, the text of which reads as follows:

(a) The Government of Israel resolves that in the future, as in the past, the city of Jerusalem shall be the religious, cultural and scientific centre of the entire country and of the Jewish people.

(b) The Government therefore resolves that it is incumbent upon the Hebrew University to continue its activities and to develop them in Jerusalem, as a scientific institute of Palestine and the State of Israel.

(c) The Government of Israel will extend to the University all assistance possible for its maintenance, development and the expansion of its work.

(d) In view of the lofty mission to be performed by the Hebrew University in the life of the Jewish people and its cultural development, the Provisional Government calls upon the Jews throughout the world to come to the aid of the university in the fulfilment of its tasks.

In view of the changing conditions prevailing in Israel and from the point of view of the general interests of the city and of its economy, the Hebrew University is today one of the two main institutions in Jerusalem and is now being called upon to play an important and decisive role in the strengthening of Judaism in Jerusalem.

The Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University, with Chapters in every province in the Dominion and with national headquarters at 1430 Peel Street, Montreal, is assisting the work of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Sees Israel As Homespun Socialist State

The social character, economic fabric and political appearance of the newly-born State of Israel will depend largely on the number and type of the new immigrants entering the country during the coming five years. By that time, if all goes according to plan, the present population of 750,000 should be almost doubled, says Julian Louis Meltzer, in the New York Times.

However, although Israel's character, fabric and appearance have not yet assumed definite shape, it does not mean that Israel's public life is still in the formative stages. On the contrary, if judged by the current party distribution among the doctrine-minded citizens, it is apparent that state socialism more or less identical with the type governing Britain will receive decided encouragement at this November's elections for the Israeli Constituent Assembly. Thereafter a socialist system will indubitably develop.

It is important to remember that under the British-mandated administration which terminated on May 14 this year, the Jewish labor parties and unions built up a powerful central federation known as Histadruth. In point of fact this became a socialist empire in miniature.

No matter what popular grievances arose over other forms of restrictive British legislation, it cannot be denied that the development of organized socialist practice among the Jewish populace was virtually unfettered. Today the active Histadruth membership, which totalled more than 170,000 persons of enfranchised age at the last count, represents almost one-half of the Jewish adult population.

Supplementing its functions as a trade-union center, Histadruth is also a large employer of working men through various construction jobs. Histadruth's third role is as an association of political parties with socialist programs.

When the Provisional Government of Israel and the Council of State came into being in the middle of May, Histadruth, with a ready-made political, professional and economic apparatus, was able to take the lead in the creation of the state machinery.

Although Histadruth groups contributed substantially in manning the executive and administrative branches of the new state, as well as its judiciary, there has been some heated controversy over whether Histadruth should nationalize its big economic and financial undertakings, which possess tens of millions of dollars' worth of assets and plants. It is a tussle between orthodox socialists and the left-wingers who support "whole" state economic socialism.

A majority of orthodox socialists are members of the country's largest socialist group, the Palestine Labor party — known by its Hebrew initials as Mapai. They believe it would be premature, before the permanent character of the state has been established, to forego direct control through Histadruth of the influential network of economic enterprises established over years of effort.

This moderate laborite opinion is based upon the uncertainty about the political thinking of future Jewish newcomers, of whom a total of half a million may be expected to arrive by the end of 1954. But the United Workers party, or left-wing socialist group known as Mapam, inclines more toward the view that a dynamic credo generates increasing support and creates a wider proletariat, and that nationalization, like charity, begins at home.

It can be predicted that most of the newcomers in the next five and even ten years will be of a working-class type. It is an inescapable conclusion that at least 90 per cent of the half-million new arrivals will join the socialist ranks.

What place will there be for middle-class investors of large means, whether resident or absentee financiers? Israeli Minister of Finance Eliezer Kaplan, one of the Labor party's luminaries and a shrewd financial expert, announced this month a number of inducements designed to attract American and other investments.

Israeli Government chiefs holding socialist views have been careful not to say explicitly that the new republic was moving in the direction of total socialism and insist upon the entirely democratic letter and spirit of the proposed constitution that is now in draft form.

With one or two exceptions, all the Israeli diplomatic envoys to the capitals of the countries that have so far recognized the new Jewish state are nominees of the Palestine Labor party or the United Workers party. Quite apart from considerations of favored-party treatment, the public believes that the socialist appointees will have the task of explaining to the countries where they are accredited why Israel must become a homespun socialist state.

SAFE SOLVENTS

Each year many industrial workers suffer injuries through the misuse of cleaning or degreasing solvents. Used in the proper manner in well-ventilated places, most solvents are entirely safe, but even the smallest solvent operation is a potential danger if it is not properly conducted. Solvent fumes are dangerous. They should be treated with respect.

• UNITED ZIONIST COUNCIL of Canada: Samuel J. Zacks, president, telegraphed External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson, urging the Canadian Government to refrain from accepting the late Count Bernadotte's proposal for Palestine in entirety, contending that such action would not be in concert with the Canadian United Nations vote on partition and would reduce Israel to a miniature state. The Council's telegram also called on Canada to recognize Israel in view of the mediator's recommendation that the United Nations recognize the state. It said that by "substituting Western Galilee for the Negev the recommendations reduced Israel's territory from 5,500 square miles to a little more than 2,500, an area without the absorptive capacity for large scale immigration and re-settlement of refugees which have been and continue to be one of the greatest objectives of the State of Israel. Citizens of Israel who reluctantly accepted the mediator's decision last November and who since then defended this decision with their blood are now asked to accept another partition of an already comparatively small area. In effect the Bernadotte recommendations, if accepted in their entirety, would penalize Jews for accepting the United Nations decision and would reward the Arabs who attempted by force of arms to overthrow the United Nations ruling. We respectfully submit that the mediator's proposal be used solely as the basis for further negotiations aiming at peace and not be accepted in toto."
